Home page

The idea of the home page is to have a compact collection of all the content that reflects the whole website as much as possible. This page layout was based on shuffling background images as well as a logo in the middle and an inviting motto just below it. There is also a drop down arrow as a signifier to guide the user to scroll down for viewing the rest of the page. The page has the logo in the header section, as well as background information of the website, SDG and Regina section beside it. The search bar is placed on the top right corner which has a drop-down feature to search with additional filters. The side-bar has been placed on the left side and is present with a specific icon and will only make the side-bar visible when the icon is clicked. The cultural constraint is avoided while placing the side-bar logo as it is traditionally placed near the search bar in many modern social media sites. Having the sidebar on the left side ensures the user can watch the visual data without interruption as it takes up comparatively less space of the data page. The page will also have a progression tracking article of Regina right after the welcoming page and some related or factual articles of Regina's social resources and community will be displayed below it to inform the user of interesting data. At the very bottom, the contact of relevant sites and pages will be included with links.

Sitemap

The sitemap has 4 main pages, keeping the website as compact as possible. The about page is where there are details of the work of the site, The SDG and Regina pages will focus on SDG progression in Regina in general. The 4th page will have all the data and statistics of the community in Regina. Related pages will have inter-linking between them.

Visual Data

The prototype has a very generic data presentation concept as it focuses on the fundamentals of a minimalistic web page. The unique features that stand out are the ability of the user to change between multiple iterations of the visual data as well as ability to have a custom selected year range to show the display. The bars and charts of the data will also have descriptions for the user to quickly acknowledge what situations the information is reflecting. There will also be an icon of SDG, which the visual data is related to. Again, for the user to learn more, there will be a brief background explanation of that SDG progression in Regina in recent years. The next and previous data buttons will also provide ease to user experience as the user will not have to load the side-bar again and again to see the contents. There is also a navigation bar to let the user know of their location inside the web page and is a great example of the digital wayfinding notion.
